LOCAL NEWS.

F. P. Adams & Co. hold a cash sale this forenoon.

Mail matter marked per Claus Spreckels will go by that vessel, sailing about noon to-day.

The last upright timbers of the Sallors' Home were brought crashing to the ground about three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Hon. J. L. Kaulukou has been appointed Marshal of the Kingdom over again, although the public have never been informed that he had resigned.

Friday, a witness in the admiralty case, said on cross-examination that he had been out ten months from a term of ten years' imprisonment for murder.

The barkentine Geo. C. Perkins, besides cleaning and painting, is having her centerboard casing taken out and the opening closed up, on the Marine Railway.

Officer Kaupane and others last evening arrested three Chinamen at the wash houses, King street, taking a quantity of opium along with them to the Station.

Gov. Laukea has bought Furneaux's recent picture of the Volcano, for $150; also Otembahi's model of the Kamehameha statue, for $25. Both go to adorn the Palace.

The act has been proclaimed making the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court Vice-Chancellors, having concurrent jurisdiction in Chambers with the Chancellor of the Kingdom.

Thursday next at ten o'clock is appointed for the hearing, by Judge Preston, of an application for final discharge made by Hon. W. C. Parke, as assignee of the bankrupt estate of L. Kaitufen.

Besides the larceny case reported elsewhere, the Police Court business yesterday consisted in Antone Freitas being fined $6 for drunkenness, and O. Schuler forfeiting $10 bail for the same offense.

An advertisement of a meeting of the "V. H's alias the F. F. V's," in last evening's Bulletin, is supposed to refer to the Violent Howlers, otherwise the Furiously Frantic Vocalists. One of 'em was practising uptown last night, causing the Caterwaulers' Community to hold an indignation meeting on a neighboring woodshed roof.

Sport this Evening.

To-night the first balk line match between the rival billiardists, McCleery and Say'or, occurs at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel. Particulars will be found in the advertisement in this paper. As an exhibition of skill, this match cannot but be away beyond those played by the rail-shooting process. With the balk line restriction, the best science of the competitors will be called forth. As only a limited number of seats are available, intending spectators will do well to look after tickets early.

SIDE LIGHTS.

The Hawaiian Hotel Stables, one of the best appointed establishments of the kind in the Kingdom, have an advertisement in the HERALD that must command the attention at once of the driving public and of horsemen. Messrs. Miles & Hayley evidently believe in letting the public into their confidence when they have anything for the benefit of the public. Persons in want of any of their conveniences, conveyances, or what they offer for sale, will be very shortsighted if they do not call round to the Hawaiian Hotel Stables at once.

Try Martini & Cider. It is absolutely pure. Macfarlane & Co., agents.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."

The Admiralty Case.

Evidence on the part of respondents continued all day yesterday before Chief Justice Judd, in the case of the collision between the steamer James I. Dowsett and the schooner Moiwahine.

Umi, sailor and cook on the schooner, testified to the binnacle lights being in proper position and burning when the collision occurred. Close and careful attention, according to his evidence, was paid to the lights on board the vessel.

Ku, sailor on the Moiwahine, swore that a green light was on the right side, and a red light on the left. He saw the Dowsett coming and sung out, "Heh there, we'll collide!" This he sung out twice. He only heard a voice after the collision. His evidence agreed with that on the other side as to the conversation that passed between the two vessels at the time of the accident. The Dowsett he thought was half a mile away when he first saw her. It was ten minutes from the time he saw her side lights till the collision. He could not tell the port side from the starboard, but could tell the right from the left side. The lamps were not put out by the shock, but burned brightly after the collision. The Dowsett was on the port bow at the time that they hailed.

Friday, another sailor on the schooner, was examined at length. He swore the lights were all right before and after the collision. He did not know port from starboard, but knew right from left. There was a green light on the right, and a red on the left. Someone was holding a light in his hand on the vessel, but it could not have been the binnacle lamp, as that was still in the rigging.

W. A. Kinney, of counsel for respondents, took the stand, but Mr. Neumann objected to his testimony and the objection was sustained, Mr. Dole noting exceptions.

Capt. Sam testified regarding a conversation he had with Leiloa, of the Dowsett, who told him that he did see lights on the Moiwahine.

M. P. Robinson, of the firm of Allen & Robinson, respondents, went on the stand but was withdrawn. Kaikaai, one of the crew of the steamer Mokoli, that picked up the Dowsett's crew, swore that none of the crew of the steamer said that the collision occurred because the schooner had no lights. They did not say, either, that it was because the crew of the Dowsett were overworked.

About 4:30 the hearing was continued till 9:15 this morning.

Back to the Line.

Yesterday a gang of men were engaged in moving the two-story wooden building of Mr. Wm. Kalaehao, last but one on the harbor side of King street toward the bridge. It was put back seven feet to the new street line, and the large building of Mr. Armstrong is to be shifted to the same alignment. This will remedy the unsightly irregularity that has existed at that end of the street before and since the fire. It is a wonder those proprietors did not come to an understanding with the Government before rebuilding when burned out.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

GRAND LARCENY.

Trial and Commitment of McGiffin.

Yesterday Thomas McGiffin was brought up on remand before Police Justice Bickerton, for examination on a charge of being accessory to the theft of about $800.

E. F. McChesney, a clerk in the employ of McChesney & Son, testified to the loss of an amount, said by his father to be $930, from a pocket book in the store of that firm.

Harry McChesney, who was committed for trial the other day, told how he took the money from the pocket book while his brother's back was turned, on Friday last. He put it in his pocket and walking up town met McGiffin at the corner of Fort and King streets. They went into Lewers & Cooke's lumber yard, and he gave prisoner the money. They made an appointment to meet again at seven that evening, at the corner of King and Alapai streets, which they kept. On meeting he asked McGiffin how much money there was, and he told him $800. Prisoner said he was going into the country to change it for gold. Witness said he could change it in town, and proposed that they should go away on the steamer for San Francisco next day. McGiffin said there was not time, but he would be ready to go to Australia on the 30th, adding that he did not want to see McChesney until they were ready to go away. Next morning witness saw prisoner at McIntyre's corner, and followed him through various streets trying to get the money back, as he had told his father he took it and promised to get it back. First McGiffin told him the money was in his bed, but later said he had buried it in the country. He then drove off in a carriage, leaving witness on Emma street, who went back to his father's store. Defendant knew where the money came from, for they had several conversations about it. They were to go to Australia, thence to Hongkong, where defendant said he had a brother. When trying to get the money back he told prisoner that the certificates taken were numbered and payment stopped at the bank, and if he tried to change them at the bank he would be caught. He had known defendant for a year, and they had been a good deal together. Defendant used to go to Allen & Robinson's stables every day at 12 o'clock, so that if witness got the money he would give it to him.

Geo. Hawkins, hackman, told of prisoner getting into his carriage on Emma street on Saturday, and of McChesney being in that street at the time.

Thomas McGiffin, the prisoner, took the stand and was sworn. The first time he met young McChesney was when a trunk was robbed in Mr. McChesney's house, and he went there as a special police officer. He gave some details of what passed between him and young McChesney and the lady owning the trunk. Afterward he met him at a theatrical rehearsal. Next he knew of young McChesney was lately, when he wanted him to hire a brake to drive to Waialua, and afterward went off with another boy and left defendant. On a later occasion they went together with some wahines to Waikiki. McChesney said that night he would give $20 to see a hula, and a few nights afterward he appeared with $30. They started off, getting three bottles of wine at the Bee Hive. McChesney would not desist drinking until he got pretty boozy, and that night he went home with a young wahine. After that he spoke about his father having been at him for his conduct, and asked defendant about the next steamer, as he wanted to run away. McChesney said he had $200 in the Postal Savings Bank. About two nights later defendant was sitting on a box at United Carriage Company, and McChesney called him away and again asked about the steamer. He advised him not to run away and not to get drunk, as he would get defendant into trouble as well as himself. Defendant told Officer Hopkins that McChesney was intending to run away. McChesney took him with him to the Hotel on Saturday and told him to take the brake from him; he was going to stow away on steamer, as his father intended sending him to San Francisco reformatory school. Defendant told him not to do so, as his father could not send him to the San Francisco reformatory school. They parted and defendant, on coming down town again, met Mr. Dayton, Deputy Marshal, who asked him for that $1,000, and on being asked what he meant, told him that McChesney said he had given him that $1,000. Mr. Dayton told him there was a warrant at the Station for him, and he had better go down. That was all.

Justice Bickerton addressed the prisoner, reminding him that it was not necessary for more than a probable case to be made out against him to secure commitment. Some of the evidence, which he referred to, was very positive, and defendant's own statement corroborated the boy's in many material points. He committed him for trial to the Supreme Court.

With regard to the statement made by the prisoner about the trunk robbery, Mr. McChesney has informed our reporter that McGiffin was not sent for on that occasion, but came voluntarily to the house. On investigation nothing was discovered to be missing, the robber having found only female clothing which was not what he was after. It occurred during the season of house robberies about February last.

A New Extradition Treaty.

The Extradition treaty between the United States and the Empire of Japan was signed last April, and on the 21st of June was ratified by the U. S. Senate, with some minor amendments, which made it necessary that the document should be again acted on by the Japanese authorities. The latter having accepted the amendments prepared by the Senate, the negotiation between the two governments are now complete. This treaty is equal in its provisions to any similar treaty heretofore negotiated by the United States, and is superior to most of them. It specifies fourteen classes of crimes, including the felonious use of dynamite. It is the first Extradition treaty negotiated with any Oriental nation and constitutes an important step in the history of Japan.
